Mike Tindall gets his recall to the England side ahead of this Pool B encounter with Romania. Jonny Wilkinson also finds his way back into the starting lineup at the expense of Toby Flood despite his weaker than average kicking display against Argentina. England need to find the spark here to reignite what has so far been a much talked about underperformance.

All Blacks v France

Whether it's bacon and eggs or coffee and croissants, whatever you're having you can't beat this for a Saturday morning breakfast treat with New Zealand facing France as things start to get serious. The All Blacks have been rampant against weak opposition so far but the tournament favourites haven't been properly tested yet and this Pool A clash should provide it.

Manchester City v Everton

With Carling Cup business behind them Manchester City resume domestic duties and host Everton at Eastlands. City will be keen to banish memories of last week's squandered 2-0 lead against Fulham and focus on the job in hand. Everton will have their chests out after an equally successful Carling Cup outing this week and the fact that they are unbeaten in their last five in all competitions.

Stoke v Manchester United

Stoke's quiet yet confident climb into a top five spot in the Premier League has gone largely unnoticed but their Carling Cup win over Tottenham midweek brings them into view again. Their Europa League campaign has also started well following an unlucky 1-1 draw away to Dinamo Kiev. Stoke City are clearly a candidate again. On the other hand Manchester United need little introduction here. Live on ESPN.

Featured LTO Review This Week

Beaten Females has been reviewed for ten days and as of Thursday the profit is 466.57 points on a starting bank of 500 points. That's over 93% profit in 10 days! This will need watching, as the stakes cannot realistically keep on increasing at the rate they are. If you were doing this yourself, you would probably take off some profit at some point and start the cycle of staking again.
