Manchester United v Blackburn Rovers

Blackburn's fate looks all but decided propping up the Premier League table along side North West neighbours Bolton. When points are so hard to find all you need is a trip down the road to Old Trafford where memories of last season's 7-1 drubbing will be all too vivid. At the other end of the table the Manchester giants are separated only by goal difference and this one should give United a chance to close that gap.

Bolton Wanderers v Wolves

It appears that the cast is taking shape for the Premier League relegation battle and these two look candidates for leading roles. It is therefore so important to take points out of such games as they are all possible six-pointers. Bolton's Owen Coyle has the backing of his Board and has shown some battling spirit of late but have only one win in their last six, that being against fellow strugglers Blackburn.

English Premier League Relegation

With the turn of the season fast approaching and the hectic festive period schedule looming up the picture of potential relegation candidates starts to take shape. Last season the bottom seven were made up of four B's and three W's with two B's and one W making the drop. Cryptic? Yes, and this season is no different with two B's and two W's making up the drop zone as we head towards the New Year transfer window.
