The 'double in, double out' format of the World Grand Prix of darts is evocative of pub darts but this gives a special edge to this event at the CityWest Hotel in Dublin. Phil The Power Taylor, as top seed, is the natural front runner with last year's champion James Wade not far behind. Taylor has only missed out on the final in this event four times since 1998 winning nine times in that time.

After an epic final dig by the Scots England qualify for the quarters as Pool B champions. The English have not looked like potential candidates whatsoever and some might say that they did not deserve the right to progress. France however have ridden their luck and go forward despite having lost against both the All Blacks and Tonga. The winner gets either Ireland or Wales.

The much anticipated All Blacks choke problem has not materialised and for the time being at least they look like the real deal with a points difference of 191 and four bonus points during the pool phase. After running England very close Argentina qualify second in Pool B but England are far from convincing so for the Pumas this looks like quite a different problem to deal with.

South Africa v Australia

Australia's Pool C defeat to Ireland came at a cost and that cost is a quarter final against World Champions South Africa rather than a possibly easier encounter with Wales. The Wallabies have been most business-like otherwise however scoring ten tries more than Ireland. South Africa on the other hand have ground it out nicely scoring 21 tries in the pool phase and conceding only 2.

Rugby World Cup

New Zealand is the venue for the 2011 Rugby World Cup where the hosts are hot favourites for the Webb Ellis trophy. Despite their recent dominance the All Blacks have failed to turn up in this tournament since winning the inaugural event in 1987. Meanwhile Australia have featured in three finals winning twice, holders South Africa were previous champions in 1995 and England have just the one victory to their name as a result of the famous Jonny Wilkinson drop kick in 2003.
